Comfort and togetherness. Winter arrives with us already well practiced in the things we love most about the season. This year we emerge from the cocoon of these colder months in a much more gradual way, responding to the practical nature of our confinement, while seeking the reconnection to the world and each other that helps us feel whole. We have newfound skills in viewing life virtually, and in its own way this brings us to new vistas and people to connect with.

The Yarra Valley and Dandenong Ranges change with the season yet remain unchanged – beautiful, plentiful, restful – every day of the year. The vintage harvested in autumn makes its way into bottles and to our tables by special delivery, the feasting food is prepared and the home fires are still burning.

Because one thing is certain, like the change of seasons can be relied on, so too can we anticipate the opening of the cellar doors, the restaurants, the roads to nowhere and the coming together of family and friends to celebrate our renewed appreciation of life.

Nothing will matter – we will welcome the rain, relish the snowfalls and fall in love all over again with the experience of being alive in the Yarra Valley and Dandenong Ranges. All that yearning, all that dreaming – it will carry you here.

Bella Weddings

Finding Italy in the Yarra Valley

With destination weddings enjoying a period of popularity, many couples will be feeling a little grounded in their wedding planning with the current restrictions on travel. If you've always dreamt of an Italian wedding, there is a uniquely Yarra Valley way for you to have your wedding closer to home and still hit the high note of a 'giorno del matrimonio' too. Right here, and soon.

The Yarra Valley has a long history of Italian life – it's been in our DNA for over a century, and there's an abundance of venues and suppliers that take pride in their cultural heritage. It's more than just location, location, location. These local destinations are infused with the glorious heart of Italian life, close to home, and a celebration of culture that will bring just the right 'bella Italia' to your day, your way.

You don't have to be Italian to appreciate the best of an Italian way of life and you can style your wedding day from subtle acknowledgement to full embrace.

Have your 'primo bacio' as a married couple in the immersive space at The Chapel at Stones of the Yarra Valley – the feel is simple, pure and calm, with thought given to every perspective.

Whitewashed walls and timber, treelined driveways and breathtaking 360 views will only enhance your beauty! Or explore The Capella at Zonzo Estate, which is also exquisitely appointed for your ceremony.

While you can create a touch of Italy anywhere, there are several venues in the Yarra Valley that have already done it for you. Massaros in Kangaroo Ground, Stones of the Yarra Valley and Meletos are full of authentic charm, and luxurious in detail. Antiquities and uniquely restored and/or imported furniture and fittings provide heart-stopping beauty and a considered sense of place that speak to a design aesthetic and 'collectable' eye that has been refined through years of styling and hunting.

Stay over in a Tuscan styled villa (and not an airfare in sight). The Farmhouse Loggia at Meletos is stunning and truly a homage to the finer details of Italian design. The boutique hotel rooms are furnished with luxurious textiles, leather and vintage timber 'curated' to create the ambiance and joy of an Italian sojourn – design lives here as an artform. Perfect accommodation for a wedding and/or honeymoon, with worldly views across the vines and perfect photo opportunities.

The formal gardens at Alowyn Gardens will have you wistful with their beauty in an "I'm not crying, you're crying!" kind of way. Although 'French' in influence, the gardens, with their structured box hedges and gravel pathways, have all the features of a European sensibility and are stunning photo locations.

Add a little more flavour with Bocce on the lawn at Punt Road Winery (or hire a set up for your venue) and bring in some of the best gelati from Bam Bam Italian or Yarra Valley Chocolaterie.

Fabulous photography

In search of a cobbled laneway, stucco sundrenched wall, retro vespa, salumeria, flower cart or a striped awning for an Italian-infused backdrop for photos? Locals know and Rick Liston Photography has his shutter poised and ready to show you some secret settings with full Italian charm – not to mention the thousands of vines planted in perfect rows that nod directly to a Tuscan landscape. You'll even find an Olive Grove at Massaros.

Top 10 Yarra Valley Wedding venues/Restaurants serving Italian cuisine

Long table lunches, grazing locally grown seasonal produce, fine dining and wood fired pizza – it's all here and delicious so you can 'mangiare' just the way you want to.

Italian Wines - love the local vino

Take the Italian theme all the way and choose Italian varietal wines grown in the Yarra Valley, such as:

- Arneis, Brachetto, Fiano/Fiano E Greco, Lagrein, Marzemino, Montepulciano, Moscato, Nebbiolo/Nebbiolo Rose, Nascetta, Pinot Grigio, Prosecco, Sangiovese, Savarro and Teroldego.

Wineries with Italian varietals include:

Innocent Bystander, Graceburn Wines, Soumah Estate, Giammarino Wines, De Bortoli, Rochford Wines, Graceburn Wines, Greenstone Winery and Sedona Estate.

Don't forget your 'before and afters' the aperitivo and digestivo. Whilst not necessarily made in the Yarra Valley, a full appreciation can certainly be developed here with these Italian classics. And there's always Four Pillars Gin because Negroni!

Winter hearts filled with love

There's so much to love about winter. It's the perfect season for intimate occasions, for keeping each other close, shoulder to shoulder, heart to heart, facing the world together. For every couple who has had to postpone their big day, winter promises the wait will be worth it. There's time to re-evaluate – do the same things still make your heart sing? Time to plan – what's possible now that might not have been six months ago? Time to anticipate – the long game is marriage and that's worth waiting for. And time to enjoy being engaged because love is love.

Staying open to possibility and being flexible are the survival tactics of the day, but they are also terrific skills to master in wedded life. Big love is just as delightfully expressed in small intimate ceremonies, and if you simply can't wait to be betrothed, a tiny wedding can be created for you with ease in the Yarra Valley and Dandenong Ranges. Outdoor garden or vineyard settings and celebrants that bring authenticity and charm to your day are part of who we are.

A great photographer can create the right kind of drama with a cloudy sky, many restaurants and venues are doing delivery and special catering – you can even get a delivered-at-home High Tea to celebrate. So if you're not ready and able to leave home, your wedding can come to you.

And for the couples who dream big and want to share their day with everyone they know, there's always the option of small ceremony now and big party later. Venues throughout the region will say welcome back. Virtual tours are one way to picture yourself in some of the most stunning venues without leaving home, so explore them all.

Winter is made for this. Find Your Self cosy and ready for your day, your way.

Kiara & Tristan

Get Hitched

@BulongEstate

Meet the couple

Six years ago Kiara, a Project Manager, and Tristan, a Human Resources Manager, were co-workers on a construction site in Gladstone in Queensland. They shared a mutual friend Steph, and Tristan had a habit of showing up whenever he knew Steph was with Kiara. His big moment of 1:1 time with Kiara came, however, when Kiara sought out his help to open the rusted closed door of a container one day. "I pride myself on being an independent woman, but it just wouldn't budge and Tristan couldn't move it either! Eventually I got it open because I am stubborn but from that moment, we've been in one continual conversation."

"Not long after, I booked some beachside glamping. Tristan invited himself along and from then we've been a couple. Somehow our relationship blossomed while we were both working 60-hour plus weeks on a construction site. I think we can attribute that to all the little gestures during that time. We had to catch a ferry to work, and there was a row of just two seats. Each morning, we would wait for each other on the newly titled 'lust seat' although it quickly became the 'love seat'"

"The funniest thing is we worked out we'd spent 15 years of our childhoods living in Gladstone and had many mutual friends, but we'd never met," says Tristan. "We think that meeting finally in our late 20s was serendipitous at the very least," says Kiara.

Who proposed?

“Tristan is a master creator of romantic events,” says Kiara. “He orchestrated every last detail. I didn’t have a clue!” Having set up a few days leave with Kiara’s boss, Tristan told his unexpected bride-to-be to pack a bag for a couple of nights, and they headed in the direction of glamping accommodation (just like their first weekend away) in Daylesford. After some wistful looking at the gorgeous Clifftop at Hepburn Villa, and then driving past, Tristan sneakily doubled back to surprise Kiara with the news he had booked them a room. “I didn’t want her to think I was going to propose so I said nothing the first night, but the next day I booked us massages and the team at Clifftop helped me by setting up the room with candles, rose petals strewn up to the door, wine and two Go Pros. We got back to the villa and I flicked on a video on the TV. We’re pretty big Aussie hip hop fans and thought the marriage of Eso (from Bliss N Eso) and his wife was ideal. We’d always said we would love for our relationship to be as fun as theirs appeared. So I arranged for Eso to record a special message to Kiara. She watched it and finally realised what was happening.”

“He put in so much time and effort, He even got me the perfect Blue Sapphire ring one I’d pointed out three years earlier. Apparently, he’d taken notes back then and had it custom made,” says Kiara.

How did you choose your ceremony and reception venue?

“We wanted a wedding destination that would allow us to do as much as we wanted to ourselves. We looked at several wineries – we are both passionate wine lovers and enjoy good food – and when we met Monica at Bulong Estate we loved how flexible and supportive she was. The vistas were gorgeous and Monica was genuinely excited with our ideas. We knew we’d be able to do things our way – which wasn’t very traditional.”

What was your wedding theme?

“We are both massive music and festival lovers as are our friends. We wanted a wedding that was a party that we just happened to get married at. So we created the theme of a music festival we named ‘Ellery Dayze’ a play on our surname. It started as a joke, but it was a perfect expression of who we are and what we love.

A sign at the front gate welcomed people to ‘Ellery Dayze’ and I made backdrops for three sound stages, which were all outdoors among the vines. Along with three other music acts, we invited a surprise band – a ‘Daft Punk’ tribute band with full set up and we had DJ sets. We had it all – even stubby coolers for guests and wristbands – just like a music festival,” says Kiara.

A chill out area was set up with bean bags and couches with an emphasis on comfort. “Our ceremony was super-relaxed. We had chairs on one side and picnic rugs and huge cushions handmade by Kiara. The feel was modern boho with festoon lights, and cane peacock chairs for the formalities. It was all about what we wanted – not what we thought we should have or do. That was the theme – no rules, no traditions unless they made sense to us and we valued them.”

“Guests were treated to a grazing table, followed by a set menu from two food trucks (one for burgers and one Vietnamese) and a dessert bar and wedding cake. “People could just eat what they wanted when they wanted to – in between some serious dancing!”

Is there a story behind your dress?

“I didn’t know what I wanted to wear so I tried on dozens of dresses and eventually had one custom made that was a little of each dress I liked. My whole design ethos was comfort and easy elegance. I wanted a dress I could dance in for hours,” says Kiara.

Kiara and Tristan had five attendants each. The women decided what style of dress they wanted in a ‘pinky-red’ colour spectrum. The guys wore a navy suit of their choosing. Tristan, although planning to wear a floral jacket and be the centre of attention, chose an eye catching pinky-red jacket.

Tell us about the special elements of your day.

Tristan wrote his own vows and included 15 references to music festivals in the copy. People were giggling as they caught on. Kiara wrote hers from the heart – unique and sentimental.

Tristan’s wedding band has a blue sapphire to mirror the beauty of Kiara’s engagement ring and connect the two pieces.

The DIY aspect of the wedding was present in every element of the day. Kiara made many of the props, all the bonbonniere (succulents in hessian bags), did the flowers, backdrops and neon sign, designed all the invitations and wedding website and did some of the baking for the dessert table.

What’s your best advice for planning the perfect wedding?

“Have a fixer – close buddies who are go-tos on the day and can deal with the bits and pieces you don’t need to know about on the day,” says Tristan.

“I loved having a sense of control and I love planning, so I took my spreadsheets to a whole new level making my own custom designs for planning, scheduling and budgeting,” says Kiara.

“They are so good”, says Tristan, “they should be available to everyone. We were stress-free on the day because it was planned so well.”

What were the highlights?

“Our families are a big part of our lives, so they were a big part of our day. Colleen Byrne, our aunt, was our celebrant and did an absolutely amazing job – it was really special having someone who knew us so well do the ceremony. Our mums were our witnesses and a cousin was an absolute legend with organising the set up on the day. It was perfect to have them all involved. More than two-thirds of our guests came from Gladstone to share our day, which was wonderful.”

The couple honeymooned on a private island in Indonesia and the Maldives via Singapore – a blissful time that was blistering hot! They now live in Brunswick.

“Kiara and Tristan had a very clear vision of what they wanted to achieve. And their guests were all on board enjoying the festival feel, the live music and the sense of fun that surrounded them. The whole event reflected what they are as a couple, lots of love and laughter. It was a first for me having multiple bands scheduled in different locations as well as furniture installation and multiple suppliers for the one event. But I loved helping Kiara and Tristan achieve their wedding day vision and I had a great time too.”

The perfect wedding wine selection

in the Yarra Valley

By Nicole Esdaile, Wine Consultant

The Yarra Valley is one of Australia's oldest and most renowned wine regions. The abundance of wineries and the beauty of their surrounding vineyards not only provide the perfect location and a romantic backdrop for wedding celebrations, they also offer unique and diverse, 'one-stop' opportunities to 'dazzle' guests with memorable wine experiences.

There really are no 'rules' to selecting wedding wines. It is 'your day' and most wedding venues will let you do it 'your way', but if you do choose to hold your wedding at a winery, it is customary and often obligatory, that you serve the wines made by the house'. Fortunately, in the Yarra Valley that means you can be confident that wines will be of excellent quality!

It is important to ensure the bride and groom get to drink what they like, and with so many stunning winery settings to choose from, the wine range may actually be one of the deciding factors for true oenophiles.

How many wines should we offer?

As a premium, cool-climate wine region, the Yarra Valley produces a fine array of styles and varieties that are absolutely perfect for weddings and celebrations; all pair well with food; and suit a wide range of tastes.

The usual recommendation is to 'keep it simple', but limiting guests' selections to a sparkling wine for toasts, and only one white and one red wine over dinner, reduces the enjoyment for many guests and the advantage most winery venues offers. Guests coming to a Yarra Valley wedding, particularly a winery wedding, will be expecting great wine, and as there is opportunity for providing a broader choice, doing so will only enhance the experience.

An ideal Yarra Valley wedding wine selection would include:

- One sparkling wine – ideally available throughout the event – not just for the toast!
- Two white wines – a fresh, bright, crisp Pinot Gris; and a more complex Chardonnay, the Yarra Valley's flagship white variety
- A crisp Rosé – a very fashionable inclusion and a great Yarra Valley style – no matter what the season!
- Two red wines – a bright, spicy Pinot Noir for the younger demographic; and a stylish Shiraz or Cabernet Sauvignon for the traditionalists.

Yarra Valley wineries and venues will be well equipped to assist and advise with your wine selection. Winery event staff should be able to inform and make recommendations to your guests.

How many bottles will we need?

No one wants to run out of wine at a wedding! The wine service at most winery venues is conveniently packaged into the per guest price, and is usually limited by the hours of service, rather than the volume of wine served. The winery will generally allow 1-1.5 bottles of wine per person, ensuring thirsty guests are adequately compensated by non-drinkers. Package 'upgrades' are usually available, adding Reserve or the winery's 'top range' to the selection.

Some venues may charge 'on consumption', which, while preferable in some cases, makes budgeting difficult, particularly when weddings are notorious for high volume enjoyment.

The usual balance in consumption is approximately 65% white wine and rosé, to 35% red wine. There is not a lot of seasonal variation, although guests tend to favour lighter Pinot Noir style red wines in summer. Everyone needs at least one glass of Sparkling wine for the toast!

All in the detail

Your new best friend could be a wedding planner

Many wedding and event venues these days are blank canvas spaces that provide lots of flexibility and the scope to create whatever look and feel you desire. A Wedding Planner helps select and lock-in all of the different suppliers, including the venue, photographer, celebrant, band, caterer, etc and co-ordinates all of the logistics on the day, with careful consideration of all of the practical things like council permits, generators, rubbish removal and wet weather options. They bring your vision to life and make sure everything comes together perfectly for your ceremony and reception.

It can sometimes be hard to know where the line is between a Wedding Stylist, Wedding Planner and Wedding Florist. Danielle Steele of Wild Heart Events can incorporate all of these services into one: wedding styling, wedding planning, on the day assistance, and floral design and prop hire, overseeing the entire process and event, from start to finish, taking care of any wedding-related queries or stress, creating run sheets and schedules and being the main point of contact for all your wedding vendors so you can relax and enjoy your day.

Whether you need a Wedding Planner or not really depends on how hands-on and DIY-inclined you are. It also depends on whether you want to spend the days leading up to and the morning of your wedding setting up, or relaxing and enjoying this time with your family and friends. Many venues do not pack-down at the end of an event, so unless you fancy you (or your guests) taking down decorations and removing rubbish, it's easier to outsource. Some couples decide to handle everything themselves to save money, but often they underestimate the time, effort and logistics involved in executing a wedding.

How does it work?

Coming up with the ideas and concepts for an event is just one part of a Wedding Planner's role. "Initial Consultations are usually 1.5 hours+ and involve couples downloading all of their ideas so far (this is why we all love Pinterest!). This helps us get to know each other and gives me a really good feel for what you envision for your wedding," says Danielle.

"There are hours of planning preceding the event, including essential site visits, and some set-ups can take the team several days to execute. Every little detail, including your budget – from the moment you and your guests arrive at the venue to the time everyone leaves – is considered and executed seamlessly."

What about flowers and props?

"Flowers and styling work hand in hand with each other, so by handling both of these, we can make sure everything is cohesive and the theming is spot on. We can take care of all the flower and foliage elements for your wedding. From bouquets and buttonholes, right through to table arrangements, garlands, arbour & backdrop styling or elaborate hanging installations."

Wild Heart Events also have an extensive range of props available for hire, including a beautiful new Boho Collection. They have a network of fabulous local suppliers to source extra items and services that are needed. This can save hours of trawling the internet and driving around town trying to source things yourself.

How early do you need to start planning?

"We have been engaged by a number of clients who realise a couple of months (and once only weeks!) before their wedding that there was a lot more involved than they initially thought. But it's great to start early and have time to explore all the options and enjoy the process."

Hire a Wedding Planner if you:

- are stuck for design ideas or inspiration or are not sure where to start
- have too many ideas and styles you like, and you are having trouble making these work together
- want to see your vision come to life
- have a difficult venue or location to set-up and style
- have a short bump-in and out time at your venue
- don't want the stress of doing it yourself
- don't want to burden your family and friends
- want to be prepared for potential disasters – like rain
- don't want to pack up after your event
- want to relax and enjoy the lead-up to your wedding or event

Virtually yours

Inspect your top wedding venues without leaving home

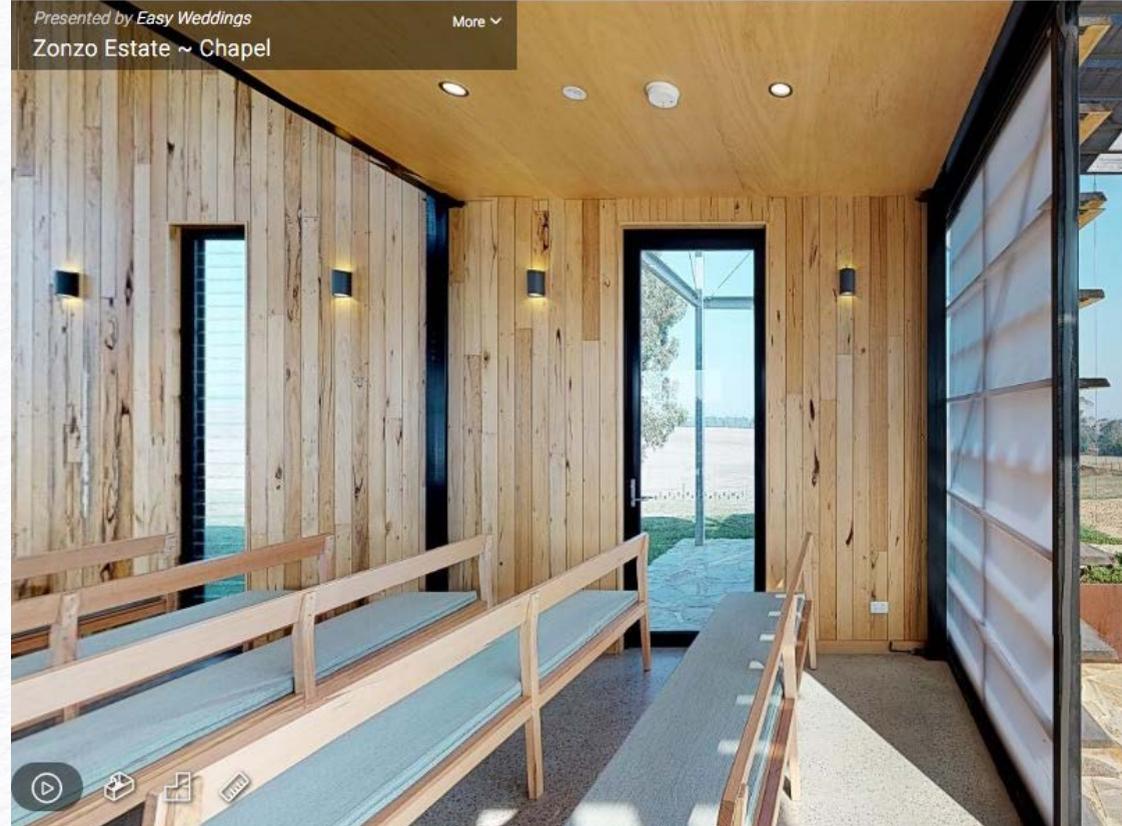

One of the most exciting moments in wedding planning, after finding the 'Yes Dress' (or outfit), is the discovery of the perfect wedding venue for your ceremony and reception.

Many couples start planning with a preferred venue in mind – a place of romantic significance such as the site of a first date, or perhaps a venue that they've always known was the one. Or perhaps everything is up for consideration, and it is the search that helps you nail what you really want. Typing the words 'wedding venues' and 'Yarra Valley' or 'Dandenong Ranges' into your browser is just the beginning.

Venue inspections come in many forms and in recent months many wedding destinations have taken the step of 'going' digital for inspections. This is great news for those who can't wait, for the couples that can't sleep at 3am and for times when travel is restricted (for reasons that can only be described as viral!). There are a host of venues in the Yarra Valley and Dandenong Ranges that are offering virtual inspections at any time that suits you and are only a click away.

Digital inspections give you a great taste of a venue without having to go there in person, and may be offered as:

Google 360 tour – Check out the Zonzo Estate or Projekt 3488 360 tours on their websites, where you can experience the feeling of stepping right inside the venue and surrounds exploring wherever you want to go. Look up, down and all around.

Click image to view

VR Tour online - Zonzo Estate's The Grounds tour is a fabulous way to do a walk through and get a sense of the space and outlook. Zoom in for a close up.

Virtual Inspections/video call tours – This is a great option if you want to ask questions as you go along. The wedding team will walk you through showing you highlights and chatting about features as you go. Facetime or Messenger tours are generally by appointment

Walk around video – Access an 'anytime video walk around' of a venue. Usually found on the venues website or YouTube channel, or sent via email on enquiry. See Marybrooke Manor's video tour as a great example.

Click image to view

What makes a virtual tour so valuable?

Short listing potential enquiries

- Streamline your research time, and minimise your 'go-sees', virtual tours are also great if you're planning your wedding from further afield.

See a venue at its very best

- Cruise through a variety of set ups and options, check out different seasons or times of day, and examples of other weddings.

To show suppliers and vendors the ins and outs of a location

- Once you've decided on a venue, it's super easy to talk through your needs and desires with suppliers with a virtual reference to work from.

Revisits for dreaming and styling

- You can only take in so much detail on an in-person site visit, so a digital tour is a great reference to have as you imagine what goes where, and how the venue is going to look with your gorgeous self in it. And you can check it out again and again, whenever you want without having to make another appointment.

Provide a sense of excitement for guests

- Sharing the digital tour with guests in advance is a great way to build even more excitement, and give guests from further away (especially overseas) an insight into where they are coming.

Many venues will offer a variety of options for you to choose from and it is often useful to do a virtual tour before a physical tour so you can be super prepared for your inspection. Happy wandering!

Venues offering virtual tours include:

Marybrooke Manor - Virtual Walk throughs can be arranged by: enq@marybrooke.com.au or on 9755 2755

Chateau Wyuna - Virtual Walk throughs can be arranged by: cwyuna@bigpond.com.au or on 9736 2555 to make an appointment.

Fabulous places for getting ready especially for brides

What is the secret to a totally chilled, luxurious, gorgeous lead up to the grand event? A fabulous venue that you can settle into and call your own while you connect, prepare and pamper. Rachel Hanson from Araluen Boutique Accommodation has welcomed many bridal parties seeking a sweet 'home away from home' experience for getting ready and beyond.

Planning an 'away-from-home' wedding has many advantages and is a fabulous way to gather your bridal party together and bring ease to wedding day preparations. Here are some great reasons to consider an accommodation wedding package not only for you, but perhaps even for the whole family!

1. Everyone is together – Weddings are one of those times when you want everyone special close at hand and involved in the wedding preparations, especially your bridal party. Families also come in so many shapes these days that it may not be possible to get ready 'at home' so a neutral space may be a stress-free space. At Araluen there is even a wedding day room, a space large enough for wedding day preparations for the whole family.
2. Gather your special people the night before – The majority of wedding groups arrive the night before allowing them the opportunity to have a pre-wedding gathering after their wedding rehearsal. Also a great time for a little pampering with in-house massages!
3. Gorgeous setting – The destination wedding is one of the most popular wedding themes and the opportunity to arrive early and leave later is all part of the treat. When you've attended to every tiny detail of a wedding in planning, having a gorgeous setting for 'getting ready' and 'pre-ceremony' photos can be a compelling reason to choose boutique accommodation where elegance is right there curated for you. 'Reveals' are also becoming very popular and being in the same venue allows for this to happen seamlessly.
4. Service and amenities – Boutique accommodation comes with personalised service – you'll have a team at hand that is there to smooth the edges and make sure every moment goes to plan. And it's also possible to book rooms for the bride and groom to get ready at one venue without seeing each other.

- 5. Holiday feels and extended celebrations – Some couples book for a third night to relax, reminisce and unwind away from home after guests have left. This also opens the option for a DIY post-wedding (next day) gathering for catchups, especially with family and friends that may have travelled a long way to see you. It's super easy to have the venue cater a special lunch or afternoon tea with all the trimmings included.
- 6. Convenience and simplicity – Choosing accommodation close to your wedding venue is just easier – there's less time in a car for a bride's dress to crease and wedding transport costs may be more manageable. Wedding suppliers are happy to travel anywhere these days. Some add a travel fee, but in the grand scheme of wedding costs, this is nothing for the simplicity it can bring to your wedding day.

Starry, starry nights

by Rick Liston

What I love about taking my couples out into a field for a starry night photo is that it is quite likely the only photo like that they may ever have taken in their lives. Technically speaking, it is the most difficult photo of the day, and a lot of conditions have to be right in order to get it. This is what makes it so spectacular when you get to show the couple the result after they've been standing together in a field in the dark. The slow shutter speed of the camera reveals a nightscape we're incapable of even seeing with the naked eye, so it's mesmerising to discover what's up there above you.

There is another beautiful by-product of taking these photos. They actually give the couple an opportunity to come outside, into the night air to spend a few quiet moments with each other, standing together, holding one another and breathing as one in order to be as still as possible.

You seldom get a chance to just be with each other on your wedding day, as strange as it sounds, let alone under an awe-inspiring sky of stars, which if you're used to living in the city, you may not often have the chance to see.

Married during iso

by Virginia Lawrence, Marriage Celebrant

When Covid-19 threatened Chris and Bec's special day, they decided to act quickly. Even though they had worked on their dream wedding for over a year, they decided that the party and all the trimmings could wait. They just wanted to get hitched and face this thing together.

Having a celebrant mum made things a little easier. A quick phone call confirmed the marriage could be fast-tracked to the next night to beat imminent restrictions on gatherings. Preparations began. Phone lines ran hot. By the next day, a select few had been invited, the stunning gardens at Cloudehill locked in, a Facebook watch party organised. Restaurant staff rushed to provide individually wrapped picnic boxes before they went into lockdown that lunchtime. Bec's mum learned how to make a bouquet and buttonholes from YouTube. A photographer friend organised childcare and drove up to the hills. Family members who couldn't be there wrote heart-felt messages of support. Others drove around with various errands, and everyone changed plans to get there. A ceremony, full of love, was hastily written.

The wedding was streamed via a mobile phone to Facebook. More than 60 people watched live, over 200 watched later – and then the story was featured on 7News!

Instead of handshakes, kisses and hugs there were elbow bumps, foot kicks and heart thumps. A special cleansing ritual signified washing away the frustration, stress and anxiety felt before the wedding. The few guests spaced themselves out along the garden borders to watch this loved-up couple join in matrimony. And at the end of the ceremony, a big surprise. Phoebe, the vocalist from the would-have-been reception band, popped up on a video call to perform the planned wedding dance music.

Enjoying the stillness and peace of the garden as night fell and the stars came out, we all left behind our worries and concerns and remained magically cocooned in a beautiful bubble of love for a few precious hours.

The experience will be treasured in our joint memories forever. Why? There weren't any presents, fancy cars, fabulous styling or a chance to party. What made it extra special was the way that so many rallied together to overcome disappointment, demonstrate support, and make something very special happen for this much-loved couple with just a few hours' notice.

"It was the perfect wedding we hadn't even dreamt of," Bec said.

Springtime Weddings

Spring arrives into our lives in a flourish of new green and fresh hopes. Gone is the need to hibernate, the warm breath of a spring breeze beckons us outdoors to celebrate in a burst of life. If you had to pick a season for falling in love, spring delivers with its blossoming flowers and sunshine. Weddings and celebrations of love just feel right in springtime – the musicians, the painters, the poets all knew it and so do we.

All around the Yarra Valley, the once dormant vines shoot tiny tendrils of love towards sunny skies. The English gardens of the Dandenong Ranges burst into life in a mad display of love and colour, and wattle blooms in tiny orbs of gold. A sense of place for a wedding is guaranteed just by being among our fabulous flora and fauna.

If you've been waiting (and haven't we all) to come out of hibernation, springtime erases the need to ponder. Those vows whether shared with 10 or 50 or the whole world (hello Zoom wedding) are more than just words, they are tiny seeds planted right here, right now, that promise a lifetime of sweet abundance. Springtime is ring time. Happy I Do lovebirds. And here's to a time when we can gather feely, dance wildly, and all embrace your new life together.
